CENTRE FOR SOCIAL STUDIES, SURAT

AN INTRODUCTION

Centre for Social Studies (CSS) is an autonomous social science research institute. With multi-disciplinary research as its core activity, CSS formulates ideas, undertakes empirical studies, theorizes and disseminates knowledge through training and publications in vernacular and English languages.

Founded by late Professor I.P. Desai in 1969 as the Centre for Regional Development Studies, CSS receives financial support from the Indian Council of Social Science Research (ICSSR, Government of India) and the Department of Higher and Technical Education, Government of Gujarat. Besides, CSS also mobilises funds from government departments and national as well as international institutions to carry out its research studies.

The Centre's faculty, though small in number, represents a variety of disciplines including sociology, social work, history, economics, statistics and rural studies. CSS has also been actively involved in training of teachers, researchers, policy makers, NGOs and social activists. Under the ICSSR Guidance and Consultancy Scheme, the Centre's faculty members offer guidance to Ph.D. scholars in designing research, refining methodology and analyzing data. With an emphasis on empirical research and Gujarat as its core research region, Centre also undertakes studies related to other parts of the country.

The research interests of the faculty encompass a wide area including scientific methods of enquiry, studies on tribal communities, dalits and minority groups, ethnographic enquiries, sects and religion, rural transformation, social conflicts, movements and riots, urban society, literature and social consciousness, human resource development (education and health), coastal studies, environmental issues and social impact assessment of projects. In recognition of their contributions to the respective fields, members of the faculty are represented on various governmental and non-governmental panels and advisory committees at local, state and national levels.

The focus of Centre's research since inception is not only to contribute to theoretical knowledge but also to assist in policy formulations for issues pertaining to social development. The Centre also takes up various training programmes in research methodology, which have been catering to the academic and professional needs of a large number of college teachers, functionaries of the government and non-governmental organizations. Having a wide ranging canvas, the research projects in the centre have addressed issues related to policies, programmes, planning and understanding of the past and the present socio-economic context and political dimensions of the State, region and the country. The major achievements of the CSS include its policy related and social change oriented research, contribution to pedagogic initiatives, published research and to intellectual discourse on various issues.

Responding to contemporary dynamics of development, key areas of research, include marginal communities, migration, labour, land and credit markets, society and Violence, culture and conflict, public health, environment and resources, governance, women and society, social justice and civil society. Theoretical contributions of CSS have been well-recognised in the field of social stratification, agrarian relations, social movements, sociology of education, dalits, tribes and development studies. Persistent empirical enquiries into deprivation, under-development and marginalization among the scheduled castes, tribes (including nomadic tribes), women and minorities highlight our research concerns.

The vision of the Centre took shape in the mind of the late Professor I.P. Desai who, as Professor of Sociology at the M.S. University of Baroda, had keenly felt the need for an autonomous social science research centre. In 1973, The Indian Council of Social Science Research (ICSSR) recognised the Centre as one of its aided institutions and the Government of Gujarat agreed to match the Council's recurring and non-recurring grants. In 1979, the institute was renamed as the Centre for Social Studies. In 1980, the Centre came to be located in its own current premises in the campus of the Veer Narmad South Gujarat University.

The Centre has been carrying out a number of projects pertaining to its key areas of research. During the last five decades, CSS has carried out 303 research projects sponsored by regional, national and international agencies. Persistent empirical inquiries into deprivation, underdevelopment and marginalization among the scheduled castes, tribes (including nomadic tribes), women and minorities highlight our research concerns.

In late seventies and early eighties, a few studies related with planning were carried out. The efforts of the institute were recognised by the government and policy makers when in the early eighties, the CSS was assigned the project on monitoring and evaluation of rehabilitation and resettlement of people affected by Sardar Sarovar Project (SSP). The CSS continued to carry this monitoring project of SSP rehabilitation till very recently and has brought out more than 25 reports on various facets of this process. Subsequently, the CSS carried out many evaluation studies commissioned both by government departments and non-government organisations.

In mid-eighties, scholars at the CSS engaged in debates over reservation with regard to making social and/or economic criteria as the basis for reservation. Strengthening and deepening its understanding of tribal society, issues pertaining to labour as well as literature, historians at the Centre also worked on issues like the 'Devi movement', labour history as well as on literature and social consciousness in the early nineteenth century.

With Surat being a leading industrial centre in textile and diamonds, CSS has completed several studies on the working class in different enterprises like cottage industries, jari and embroidery, textile, diamond etc. In 1984, in response to a writ petition filed, the Gujarat High Court commissioned the CSS and the South Gujarat University, Surat to carry out a survey on "Working and Living Conditions of Surat Textile Workers".

Responding to the emerging events and changes, in the decade of nineties, faculty members at CSS studied the communal violence in Surat at the aftermath of the Babri mosque demolition in 1992, the plague and urban planning in 1994, carried out a large-scale research on ethnography of malaria and undertook a large study of slums in Surat city. In the early nineties, CSS took a large project on social justice and covered various segments and aspects associated with prevalence of injustice around. Under the auspices of this enquiry, studies relating to the status of women, dalits and tribals in particular were carried out. A re-study of the earlier research done on practice of untouchability in rural Gujarat was also done. The gender issues have been explored in Centre's research through studies on women's participation in development programs, condition of women workers in the formal and informal sectors, their participation in various cooperative societies and panchayat institutions, etc. In addition, the projects have also covered cases of atrocities against dalits and tribals.

In recent decades, CSS has moved into some more areas covering public health, Panchayati Raj institutions, micro finance, rural credit markets, waste management and the city governance, visual culture, urban society, impact analysis of projects on people of coastal areas, studies of ground water depletion and salinity ingress, marine fishery resource management, impact of land acquisition for industries on the rural population, pastoralism and natural resource use as well as gender issues in water resource management.

THRUST AREAS OF RESEARCH AT PRESENT

Education, Social Science Research and Marginalized Society

For about five decades, Centre for Social Studies, Surat has worked on education among marginal sections, particularly among Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes. Nationwide studies, under the aegis of ICSSR and under the leadership of Late Prof. I.P. Desai (in 1970s) and recently concluded one under Prof. Ghanshyam Shah, are two such examples. These studies are well recognised, appreciated and considered as landmark interventions. Recently, CSS also completed an ICSSR sponsored nationwide study of research institutions working in the field of Social Sciences. The report is published in an edited volume by Oxford University Press.

Research Output

- Perceptions of Education among Tribes of South Gujarat: A Study of Chaudhari, Dhodia, Gamit, Vasava and Halpati/Dubla Communities

Urban Society, Working Class and Migration

With the phenomenal growth in urban population mainly due to rural to urban migration and extension of city boundaries, the problems and issues pertaining to urban social order need prime attention, both from the academic perspective as well as policy interventions. CSS has carried out number of studies such as problems of urban poor, employment, migration and governance of the city in this regard. Understanding urban health issues, solid waste management and disaster mitigation are also important areas of study, which CSS has been undertaking recently. The research studies at CSS focus urban issues at three levels – (a) relationship of production in unorganised production units, (b) migrant workers and unorganized labour market and, (c) social and urban transformation of Surat.

Social Change, Identity and Development in Tribal Society

Located in the South Gujarat region that has a large share of tribal population, Centre has been committed to document and understand tribal communities both in historical as well as contemporary terms. Focused on South Gujarat, the objective has been to document and understand various aspects of tribal communities of the region including identity, education, social life, impact of government policies (i.e. PESA, 1996 and The Scheduled Tribes and Other Traditional Forest Dwellers Act, 2006), the forest policy, health practices and health care systems, struggle over forest land and religious practices.

Development, Displacement and Rehabilitation

One of the core areas of research at CSS has been deprivation and development especially in the context of its interest in the welfare of the marginal sections. These are related to studies of the twin issue of rehabilitation and resettlement (R&R). For years, CSS has been submitting six-monthly reports of its evaluation and monitoring of the rehabilitation and resettlement of the Narmada oustees in the affected villages of Gujarat. The CSS has undertaken similar evaluation for industrial projects as well. Besides providing valuable empirical material, these reports contain important insights into the larger dimensions of mega development projects, particularly in terms of the apportionment of their social cost. CSS has also been undertaking studies on displacement related to social conflicts.

Some of the core research concerns are around contestation, negotiation and resistance over the issues of livelihood, land, caste-class and consumption as three core aspects in contemporary rural India.
